Friday: EPA, State of Nevada Honor MGM Resorts International with Prestigious Awards

Company recognized for its efforts to reduce food waste

LAS VEGAS – MGM Resorts International will be recognized by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the State of Nevada for their outstanding efforts in food recovery in a ceremony on Friday, March 6. MGM Resorts International and MGM Grand Las Vegas are two of the 32 recipients who received the 2013 Food Recovery Challenge Award, and the only recipients in Nevada. In addition, nine additional MGM Resorts' properties will be commended for increasing the amount of food scraps diverted from landfills from 2012 to 2013.

Overall, MGM Resorts International's 13 properties in Las Vegas diverted 25,398 tons of food from landfills to compost, a 50 percent increase over 2012. Composting this food instead of landfilling it conserved the energy equivalent of more than 50,300 gallons of gasoline. In 2012, Americans threw away just under 35 million tons of food – more than any other type of material being landfilled. As wasted food rots in a landfill it generates methane, a greenhouse gas.
